

Guidelines and Tips for Facilitators Presenting MBF Lessons remotely (Florida Facilitators)

While MBF Prevention Education Programs were developed to be presented in person in classrooms, we understand that during this unprecedented time, it is critical for students to receive this safety instruction.

Thus, we are allowing remote live-streamed or recorded presentations of lessons through the end of the 2019-2020 school year.

Guidelines for Presenting Remotely

Please follow these guidelines in addition to those on the Facilitator Information and Agreement Form that you previously signed (copy attached for your review).

1. Lesson facilitators must still be trained by MBF. If you have not completed the training or have others in your school who want to present the lessons remotely this year, please complete this form and we will be in touch to get you set up for the online Certified Facilitator Training course. <https://app.mbfpreventioneducation.org/fiaf-florida/>
2. MBF Certified Facilitators may record themselves presenting the lessons and distribute the recording to students via their classroom teachers, as long as the teacher is not presenting the lesson content, but simply playing the recorded lessons (presented by a Certified Facilitator).
3. Any remote or recorded presentation should include information for classroom teachers regarding the specific policies of your school and state for reporting abuse and also the methods available for a student to self-report bullying and/or abuse after the lessons.
4. Lessons must be presented via a secure, password protected site (such as Microsoft Team or Google classroom).
5. Lessons may only be used for students within your school.
6. Lessons may not be shared via any public website, portal, app, forum, or any other venue, whether offered free or at a cost.
7. Just as MBF owns the rights to the curriculum, MBF will also own the rights to any recordings of MBF program lessons being presented.
8. All recordings must be deleted at the end of the current, 2019-2020 school year.

Tips for Presenting Remotely

1. If you don't have your MBF Child Safety Matters or MBF Teen Safety Matters Curriculum Book with you at home, remember you still have access to the Facilitator Portal and can access and download the lesson Scripts and PowerPoints.
2. If your district or administrators would still like to provide the Opt-Out Form to parents, you can email it to parents and as an alternative to them signing and scanning it back if they choose to opt their child out, they can respond with an email. If needed, you can print or save the emails for your records.

3. For live-streaming lessons, if you can see your students on the platform you're using, or if you have a chat box available, you can change all questions throughout the script to a thumbs up or thumbs down activity. For "raise your hand" scenarios, if you can see students, you can keep these as is, or modify them as well. While waiting for a response from students, be comfortable with silence or a pause, just like you would with students that require a longer "think time" in the classroom setting.
4. Instead of eliciting responses after watching a video clip in the lesson PowerPoints, provide what you heard or what concerned you. If you're recording, remember to include a "pause" if there's a follow-up task such as students answering a question on a Class Notes Sheet in the MBF Teen Safety Matters lessons.
5. If you are presenting the MBF Teen Safety Matters lessons, remember to ask students to print the Class Notes Sheets themselves before beginning the lessons, if they have a printer available. Remind them, if they don't, they can still participate by just thinking about what they would write. As you go through the lesson script, read each question related to the Class Notes Sheet in case students are unable to print.
6. Be clear with students how they can communicate with you (as well as with parents and guardians). Maybe they want to share a personal story, or they need guidance and/or support. Just as you do with office hours, define when you're available or how frequently you check your email, or any other methods of communication you are currently using.
7. If you are recording yourself presenting the lessons to provide to students and you don't love the idea of being on video, you can rely heavily on the PowerPoints, but keep in mind seeing you and hearing a friendly voice will be quite comforting to students during this time. Many platforms provide a "Screen Share" option and if recording will only capture the screen.
8. If you want to make presenting/recording the lessons a bit easier, remember you can divide the two lessons into four shorter lessons using the break points shown in the scripts.

We know this is uncharted territory for many educators, but we applaud you for your perseverance and desire to keep your students safe. While our entire team is working 100% remotely, we are here to support you, so please reach out if we can help you in any way. You can reach us at support@mbfpreventioneducation.org or 904-642-0210.

Also, if you do present the lessons remotely via live-stream or recording and have tips you have found helpful, please send them to us and we will share with other facilitators.

Thank you for all you do to keep children safe. Stay safe and healthy!
